Training for senior management of Bank Gospodarstwa Krajowego

10-4592

On 23 September this year, an expert conducted a training course addressed to BGK managers on counter-intelligence prevention.

During the training, important aspects within the framework of building resilience against information threats were addressed. The opportunity was taken to discuss, in the context of the current geopolitical situation, issues concerning the role of information in the face of intelligence-terrorist threats, methods of acquiring knowledge conducive to planning and preparing acts, including typing possible targets of hybrid threats.

In addition, the meeting addressed issues concerning the needs for building an organisation's security policy, including knowledge of best practices and recommended behaviour in the event of the occurrence of the discussed threats.
